Dispute With Foreign Policy Panel Apparently Ended

J. W. Fulbright and two other ment would be permanen spy agency.

Senator Richard B. Russell,
Georgia Democrat who heads the informal watchdog group, said the three foreign policy experts were being invited to a experts were being invited to a session Monday with Richard Helms, director of the C.I.A. In addition to Mr. Fulbright, invitations were extended to Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper of Iowa, senior Republican on the foreign relations committee, and to the Senate Democratic leader, Mike Mansfield of Montana. of Montana.

Plan Rejected Last July

Last July, after considerable controversy, the Senate voted down a proposal that would have enlarged the present have enlarged the present watchdog' subcommittee to in-clude Foreign Relations Com-mittee members, The 61 to 28 vote followed a five-hour de-bate, most of it conducted in an unusual closed session of the Senate.

At that time, members of the Foreign Relations Committee contended that they should have a role in overseeing intelligence operations because they said the operations involved foreign policy. Mr. Russell called the expansion proposal an attempt to "muscle in" on jurisdiction of the Appropriations and the Armed Services Committees.

The six-member C.I.A. group is drawn from the latter two committees,

Covers All Meetings

Mr. Russell said the represen tatives of the Foreign Relations Committee would be invited to altend all watchdog subcommittee sessions—even those tha deal primarily with appropria tions.

"My present purpose is it invite them to all of the meet ings—at least for this session of Congress," Mr. Russell saiwhen asked if the new arrange members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee were invited today to closed sessions of the Senate subcommittee that the Senate subcommittee and to ask questions. The Monday session with Mr. The Monday session wit and the Rhodesia situation.

STATINTL

CPYRGHT